Headline:
Sunny spells and scattered heavy showers today.

Today:
Some bright or sunny intervals with scattered heavy showers developing in the north and east. Southwest mainly dry. Patchy haar along coasts in the north. Rather warm and humid.

Tonight:
Scattered showers, heavy at first, gradually dying out through the evening. Then a mostly dry and rather warm night with some haar along northern and eastern coasts.

Monday:
Heavy showers breaking inland, mainly over the hills. Coastal areas mainly dry, some low cloud around northeastern coasts and the Northern Isles. Warm.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Becoming drier on Tuesday, still a few showers around. Largely dry, bright and warm into midweek but turning fresher by Thursday.
